What we have and what we don't have

What we have

Metro is home to thousands of records, both contemporary and historical. The Metro archives and special collections contains records from various Metro facilities and departments such as parks, cemeteries, solid waste facilities, visitor venues (including the Oregon Zoo), Metro's Planning Department, and the administrative and executive branches of the agency. Because of this, Metro's records cover a broad variety of topics such as:

- Metro Council ordinances and resolutions
- MERC resolutions
- Meeting records
- Regional Parks Master Plans
- Regional Solid Waste Management Plans
- Budgets
- Land use planning records

Some of our earliest records are the Historic Cemeteries records which date back to the mid-1800s. However, the majority of our archive's records date back to the mid-1960s and 1970s including Metro's predecessor agencies, the Columbia Region Association of Governments

(CRAG) and the Metropolitan Service District (MSD). See the Metro Archives and Special Collections website for more information about what we have.

While most of our records are in paper format, we also have photographs, audiovisual and sound recordings, maps and plans, posters, objects, and digital records. Some of our digital records are available online, but to see other records you will need to submit a public records request.

Many of Metro's records are open to the public; however, some are not because they may contain sensitive information about individuals or information that was shared confidentially with the agency. For information on why certain records are exempt from public disclosure, please see Metro's guide on Public Records Requests and Oregon Public Records Law.
