Beaverton: Downtown to Round

The Beaverton Farmers Market

Native peoples called the area now known as Beaverton “Chakeipi,” for “place of the beaver.” Early settlers called it Beaver Dam. They settled on the high ground of the dams, above swampy areas engineered for millennia by beavers. Once drained, the ground was excellent for growing onions and other produce.

The Beaverton Farmers Market, the largest agriculture-only farmers market in the Northwest, features cheeses, produce, meats and plants from the Tualatin and Willamette valleys. On summer Saturdays, over 15,000 people come to buy local products from 100 vendors and enjoy live music and the fountain in the adjacent City Park. The market is open Saturdays, mid-May to late October, 8 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and Wednesdays, mid-June to late August, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Visit www.beavertonfarmersmarket.com for more information.

Beaverton Farmers Market

2.8 miles 5914 steps difficulty 45.483, -122.804