Abstract	The Solid Waste Alternative Advisory Committee Collection represents the work of the Solid Waste Committee through its various evolutions. Initially the work was performed by two committees created in 1987 under Metro Resolution 87-785A, the Solid Waste Technical Committee and the Solid Waste Policy Committee. The Solid Waste Technical Committee was charged with advising on compliance issues related to the Regional Solid Waste Management Plan and ensuring that regional values and state requirements were met. The Solid Waste Policy Committee was charged with overseeing the work of the Technical Committee and advising the Metro Council on solid waste policy. Both committees were expected to uphold regional values and find ways to involve the public on solid waste issues. In 1993 the two committees into were combined under Metro Resolution 93-1749A to form the Solid Waste Advisory Committee. The committee was expected to advise the Metro Council on solid waste issues, ensure regional values related to solid waste management were met, provide recommendations on the Regional Solid Waste Management Plan, and involve the public on solid waste issues.

Introduction: A Brief History of Solid Waste Alternatives Advisory Committee

In 1987 the Metro Council recognized the need to update the Regional Solid Waste Management Plan (RSWMP) and established the Solid Waste Policy and Technical Committees to advise in the creation of the new RSWMP. However, due to the changing nature of issues and staff needs, the committees were reorganized in 1993 into the Solid Waste Advisory Committee (SWAC). SWAC, and its predecessor committees, played an important role in the development of Metro's RSWMP. In the role of RSWMP's advisory committee, SWAC played the role of convener with regional partners by advising on managing waste, forecasting the future needs of the region, encouraging recycling, and advising on rate setting for solid waste disposal. The Committee also played a role in advising the Metro Council on solid waste policy and technical issues, such as the amendment to the Oregon Waste system contract, waste reduction plan, solid waste facility regulation, regional system fee credits and excise tax, diesel filters, business recycling, and sustainability.

Precursors

Metro's first RSWMP, called the Solid Waste Management Action Plan, had been adopted and implemented in 1974. In June 1987, local government representatives met for a "kick-off" meeting to discuss updating the RSWMP to better meet the current and future needs of the Metro region. This event was pivotal in developing a local government and public involvement structure that established the future policy and technical committees.

It was recommended that the Metro Council create a policy and technical committee based on the model used by Metro's Joint Policy Advisory Committee on Transportation (JPACT). This would allow local government agencies, DEQ, and technical staff to participate in the process. By July, the Metro Council passed Resolution 87-785A that formed the Solid Waste Policy Committee (SWPC) and Solid Waste Technical Committee (SWTC) to advise the Council on the development of the RSWMP. The SWTC was composed of engineers, public works representatives, land use planners, haulers, and citizens. This committee was charged with advising on compliance with RSWMP and ensuring that regional values and state requirements were met. The SWPC was composed of local government elected and appointed officials. This committee was charged with overseeing the work of the SWTC and advising the Metro Council on solid waste policy. Both committees were expected to uphold regional values and find ways to involve the public on solid waste issues.

Formation

By mid-1992, Solid Waste Director, Bob Martin proposed restructuring both the SWTC and SWPC, by shifting three positions from the government sector to members from the solid waste industry. It was felt that these changes would better meet the committees’ shift to current solid waste planning needs as work on the RSWMP was completed. By the beginning of 1993 the restructuring work shifted further to combine the two committees into one Solid Waste Advisory Committee (SWAC). This recommendation was quickly accepted and by February 10, 1993 The Solid Waste Advisory Committee (SWAC) was officially established under Resolution 93-1749A.

SWAC Organizational Changes

On October 21, 2008, Council President David Bragdon sent a memorandum to the SWAC members proposing a discussion on reorganization of the Committee at the October 27th meeting. This proposal was based on the concern that SWAC’s composition and practices diluted its credibility and impact with the Council. The assortment of private companies casting votes made it difficult for the Council to separate the public interest in SWAC’s recommendations. Council President Bragdon observed that, in his opinion, SWAC inhabited an unworkable “gray area” between being an industry lobby group and a neutral policy advisory group, and that structural change was needed to make it one or the other. Taking note of the Committee’s comments and suggestions, Council President Bragdon and staff continued the discussion on the future of SWAC. During this time SWAC was put on hiatus until a decision was made.

One year later, on November 12, 2009, the Metro Council passed Ordinance 09-1222 to amend Metro Code and revise SWAC’s membership and how the committee reports to the Council. The code amendments caused three key changes: One, SWAC would propose multiple options for Council consideration rather than give direct policy recommendations. Two, membership shrank from 27 to 13 members. Three, voting would be limited to just local government members to ensure that the options presented to Council would represent the opinion of the organizations charged with serving the public interest. The changes made to membership resulted in three functional changes: One, SWAC would solicit view on solid waste and recycling through outreach and workgroups. Two, the responsibility for chairing SWAC transferred from a Metro Councilor to a Metro manager. Three, recognizing the influence that sustainability has on regional policy, a place was reserved for a non-governmental sustainability expert.

In 2014 staff recommend updating the committee's name to better reflect the changes made to the committee in 2009. It was felt that adding the word 'alternatives' to the name of the committee better reflected the committee's role in identifying and providing input on a variety of actions to provide Council with a broad range of potential choices. On July 24, 2014 Council adopted Ordinance 14-1342 changing the committee's name from Solid Waste Advisory Committee (SWAC) to Solid Waste Alternatives Advisory Committee (SWAAC).

Summary Collection Description

This collection documents the work of the Solid Waste Policy Committee (SWPC) and Solid Waste Technical Committee (SWTC) from their beginning on July 23, 1987, their merger into the Solid Waste Advisory Committee (SWAC) on February 11, 1993, to present day.

The collection of SWPC and SWTC meetings primarily exist only on microfilm, with the exception of the January and February 1993 meetings. A large selection of the SWAC record was stored in three ring-binders in the Solid Waste and Recycling Library but a formal permanent record was never created. There were many gaps in the informal record, and the paper record had been poorly treated due to the conditions in which the records were stored. During a cleanup project for the Solid Waste and Recycling department, Records and Information Analyst Pam Welch started collecting SWAC records, with the plan to reconstruct and create a permanent record.

In July of 2009, Pam Welch, Records and Information Analyst, began the task of inventorying the SWAC collection and documenting possible gaps in the record. While researching the official start to SWAC, she learned of the advisory committee's predecessor meetings and that the record officially started with SWPC and SWTC in 1987. After reviewing four rolls of microfilm, she was able to inventory the existing collection of SWPC and SWTC meeting packets and document gaps in the record. By going through the existing collection and interviewing staff, Pam was able to fill many of these gaps. Once the inventory was complete, she began the process of preparing the records for permanent storage and microfilming. By June 30, 2010 the paper record for SWAC had been prepared for permanent storage and microfilmed. In order to create a more accessible collection, the SWPC and SWTC meeting packets and minutes were printed to paper and converted to an electronic format. This section of the project was completed by December 30, 2010. Electronic copies are available through TRIM, and a finding aid to the collection created.
