The 4th Main project is downtown Hillsboro’s first mixed-use transit-oriented development. The four-story urban-style building offers apartments and lofts, a ground floor restaurant and retail space, a publicly-accessible plaza, and underground parking. A vacant Wells Fargo Bank on the site was renovated to provide additional commercial space with authentic historic character. The development is located on historic Main Street, one block north of the Hillsboro Central MAX light rail station.

The shared vision for 4th Main can be traced to 1998 when the land was purchased for transit-oriented development by the City of Hillsboro and Metro with grant funding from the Federal Transit Administration. In 2009, Hillsboro revised its development code and adopted an urban renewal plan to encourage mixed-use development. Shortly thereafter, Metro and Hillsboro issued an open and competitive request for qualifications in order to select a private development partner. The project ultimately succeeded through the collaborative efforts of Tokola Properties and its four public partners. The Portland Business Journal recognized it as “Public-Private Partnership of the Year” and the Oregon Main Street Association awarded the project “Best New Building” designation.

Clean air and clean water do not stop at city limits or county lines. Neither does the need for jobs, a thriving economy and good transportation choices for people and businesses in our region. Voters have asked Metro to help with the challenges that cross those lines and affect the 25 cities and three counties in the Portland metropolitan area.

A regional approach simply makes sense when it comes to providing services, operating venues and making decisions about how the region grows. Metro works with communities to support a resilient economy, keep nature close by and respond to a changing climate. Together we’re making a great place, now and for generations to come.
